Quicquid agunt homines — nostri farrago libelli. Juv. Sat. 8. v. 85.

[VOL. VI

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1793.

LEXINGTON; Printed by JOHN BRADFORD, at his Office on Cro's Street, where Subscriptions, (at Fifteen Shillings per Annum) Advertisements &c. are thankfully received, and Printing in its different branches done with care and expedition.

At a meeting of sundry inhabitants of the state of Kentucky, in Lexington the 24th of July, 1793; to wit:

Richard Steele, Robert Sanders, John Hambleton, Daniel Eubank, William Trotter, Joseph Rogers, Thomas A. Thomson, and Peter Barnett; having taken into consideration the excise law, and the circumstances of our country, are of opinion, that collecting taxes under the excise law in specie only, will be oppressive to the people of this country, in our present situation, as we cannot carry our produce to market through the channel of the Mississippi. Therefore we are of opinion, it is not improper to address, first the people of Kentucky; second, the legislature of this state, and thirdly, the Congress of the United States.

Friend's and Countrymen.

We have taken into consideration the excise law passed by Congress, and are of opinion it is unjust, because our navigation is stopped (by the Spaniards) which is our natural and constitutional right; while the other states in the union have their ports open, and can sell their produce for specie; and as allegiance and protection are reciprocal, the United States ought to see that we are equally protected in our trade before we are to be expected to pay equal taxes under the excise law, in specie only. If we pay seven cents per gallon in Kentucky, when our navigation is stopped, it will be much more burthensome to us than it would be if our navigation was open. If this be true, then it will follow of course, that the excise law is much more oppressive to the people of Kentucky than to those of the other states. It is the business of the legislature to find out ways and means to have justice done to all parts of the community. If we were allowed to pay our taxes under the excise law in produce at a reasonable price, it would be more just, though not fully so; and if this was fully made known to the distillers before they were required to pay, they might make choice, either to pursue or quit the business. We hope you will join us in our petitions to the legislature of this state, and also to Congress; and altho' we are informed our former petition or memorial to Congress concerning this business, was laid on the table and neglected, yet we think it is probable they may hear and redress our grievances, if we could bring them to see our situation as it really is. That we are as a barrier to part of the other states against the savages, sustaining such damages as we do by their murdering and plundering our people to a very great amount in every year. Our trade being stopped, our country but very little improved, and of course we cannot have cider and beer as it is for spirits distilled, as the people have in the old country. It is to be hoped they will hear and redress our grievances.

FRENCH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Saturday, April 20.

A letter of Gen. Lamorlier was received from the Commissioners at Lille mentioning the return and good disposition of the troops from Breda and Gettruydenburg. The Commissioners reported, from information of a Prussian soldier, that Dumourier was guarded in fight, with irons on his legs and hands.

BRUSSELS, April 26.

On the 11th, 12th and 13th, several bloody actions have taken place in the environs of Gendse and Valenciennes, in which the French were found to give way, which was not, however, done, but with the most obstinate resistance.

LONDON, May 3.

Dumourier has declared that he would have saved the life of Louis, the XVI. if he could have found one man of firmness and courage in the whole National Convention, the majority of whom were royalists in their hearts. what a severe reflection is this upon the character of the French nation!

May 4. Ministers yesterday received letters from France, by the way of Deippe and Brightemstone, stating, that on Friday last, the 26th inst. the Gironde party had gained a complete triumph over the Jacobin faction—and that Danton, Robespierre, Marat, and many others had been massacred—that they had appointed a new Executive Council, and that they were in full possession of the Government. This news Mr. Pitt read to the committee assembled for considering of the means of assisting the disordered credit of the country; and Lord Grenville mentioned it in the House of Lords; but neither of them declared that it came to their hands upon authority that they could implicitly trust.

It is said that the leading members of the Executive Council of France are well disposed to offer terms of peace to this country, almost on any conditions. In all the debates in the National Convention, the members seem to be particularly guarded in their expressions concerning this country; and it is well known M. de Chauvelin has been very ingenuously received in France from the opinion entertained that he was too impetuous in his behaviour towards our country which he precipitated his country into a war. It is further said, that the committee of General defence in Paris was reduced to 9 in order to conduct the public affairs in general, and a negotiation with this country in particular, with privacy.

The stocks yesterday had a rise of above one per cent. owing to a report that peace would speedily take place. This report, however, founded on letters from Poland, was by no means generally credited.

May 7. Intelligence is in town from Paris of late a date as the 27th, when all remained in full tranquillity. The report respecting the state of the granaries was, that they contained a sufficient supply of corn for a fortnight. The royal family were safe and in health.

Recruiting for the armies continued in the capital; but in the provinces it every where met opposition.

It appears to be the determination of France in the ensuing campaign, to act entirely on the defensive; thus firmly occupied, it is generally considered, that they will be enabled to exhaust the patience of their numerous enemies. The opinion generally gains ground that it is the object of the Executive Council of France to conciliate measures with England, Holland and Spain.

A forty gun frigate failed from Cadiz for the Havannah, the 25th of March, with orders for the Spanish fleet there, which consists of nine ships of the line and four frigates, to take on board a body of the land forces, for an attack on St. Domingo.

The same letter states, that the Prussians commanded by General Wurfer have been beaten by the French near Landau.

NEW-YORK, June 19.

Captain Clap, who arrived here yesterday in 18 days from Aux Cayes, informs, that in coming out he saw two French ships of the line, and five frigates; they had taken a Jamaica ship of 300 tons, had taken some, and cleared the coast of all the English privateers. An English frigate of 28 guns, is probably taken, as the was near them.

Capt Kimball, who arrived at Newburyport, from St. Helena, the 29th ult. informs, that a fleet of 7 ships of the line had arrived from England, and one 50 gun ship and two frigates from Gibraltar, with troops. That when off Caudalope, he was boarded by a British cruiser, which treated them very ill, and plundered them of money, pistols, &c. but by the assistance of another cruiser, they recovered the money, but nothing else—While they were on board Capt. Kimball's vessel, they threatened the life of him and his mate. After both cruisers left him, the first one endeavored to come up with him again, which obliged him to run in under the fort of Badstetter, from which they received several shots, and thought best to keep off.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.

The Spanish Register ship, which was captured by the French privateer Dumourier, and recaptured by the British frigate Phaeton, had on board 60 tons of gold and silver; and goods to the amount of 800,000 sterling. She is said to be as rich a prize as the Acapulco, captured by Lord Anson. The British, however, by law, are entitled to salvage only, about one half. Another Spanish ship, recaptured by the British, had 90,000 dollars, besides gold, on board.

It may be collected from the late accounts of French affairs, that they still hold a good pace towards the combined powers. In the various small actions which have taken place on the frontiers of France, the Austrians and Prussians appear to have acted in the defensive, the French being the assailants. The fortie from Ciel is represented as consisting of 12,000 men, which plainly shews that the French armies are formidable in numbers; as to Dumourier, it is difficult to ascertain his exact situation—it is pretty certain, however, that he has no army or body of men with him—now is it probable that he will be entrusted with any command in the Austrian or Prussian armies. Should the account turn out to be well founded, that the moderate party have attained a permanent ascendancy in the National Convention, there is every thing to hope in relation to an eventual establishment of the Liberties of France, on the basis of a just and equal government—consistency and stability, justice and moderation in the public Councils, will produce universal confidence and destroy the spirit of faction and sedition.

MARTINSBURG, July 1.

The intelligence from the state of war in Europe is composed of a variety of accounts of skirmishes, petty actions, marches, counter-marches, projection of sieges, and inconsiderable retreats and advances. The balance in this account current is against the French; but the whole is too unimportant to justify a detail. The public are looking for, and expecting, events of the first magnitude.

In consequence of the late failures in England and Scotland, and the stagnation of public credit, it is stated that upwards of One hundred and sixty thousand men, women and children, formerly employed in the cotton manufactories in Scotland, have been dismissed and are in great distress—this, it is said, may be relied on.

Lexington, August, 24.

A Pittsburgh paper of July 27, gives the following intelligence.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.

Extract of a letter from Lyons (France) to a gentleman in Boston, dated the 16th April, 1793, and received by a vessel arrived at Baltimore from Havre de Grace.

"Since my last, of the 23d of February, our armies have been obliged to retreat before our enemies in Flanders, by the treason of our generals; but that check has not disheartened the nation, which has since displayed more energy than ever; six hundred thousand men have enlisted in less than a month; the patriotism of our national guards is above all expression; never was such an emulation; fathers dispute with their sons the honor of marching to the frontiers; my two Clerks have gone as cheerfully as if they had been going to a ball. I would have already marched myself, were I not afflicted with that cruel gravel which torments me more and more.—There are some partial insurrections in Brittany, fomented by the emigrants and neighboring Priests, but as we hear every day that the insurgents are driven from every quarter, we have great hopes that tranquillity will soon be restored.

"Our city had the reputation of being aristocratic, but we have now expelled from our walls the enemies of liberty and equality, that not only have we regained the esteem of the other departments, but we enjoy the greatest tranquillity."

The American schooner Cleopatra, captain Williams, arrived here last Monday from Spain and left from Coruna. She left port the 17th of May. Accounts were received, prior to the Cleopatra's sailing, that an engagement had taken place between the French and Spanish forces, at St. John de Luz and Bayonne, in which the Spanish forces had met with a severe repulse, and were driven back to St. John de Luz, which is on the frontiers; and in their retreat they were obstructed by a river, and not having a sufficient number of boats, they were forced to swim, in which great numbers were drowned. The head quarters of the French army being at Bayonne after the en-ment the French troops retired to that place—their number in that garrison consists of a formidable army.

There were also accounts by private letters at Cotruia, that the French had decoyed the Spaniards into their country, by the diversion of retreating until the reinforcements from Bayonne came up, and then the patriots faced about and beat the Spaniards all the way back, and a great deal farther than they had advanced, with great slaughter.

A vessel is just arrived at Norfolk in ten days from Boston, spoke a brig from Bristol, only 23 days out; the captain of which informed him, that the French had gained a signal victory over the combined armies of Austria and Prussia, near Dunkirk; and that they beat and drove them in all positions, making great slaughter, and taking a number of prisoners.

On Thursday last the President of the United States returned to this city from Virginia.

July 26.
Yesterday arrived here the brig John, captain Whitwell, from Amsterdam.

By this vessel, which brings news from that port down to the 15th of May, we learn that the affairs of France are in a more prosperous situation than the people here (considering the information heretofore received) can form any idea of—that the most singular success attends their armies everywhere—that it is with the greatest difficulty, with the most arbitrary proceedings, the combined powers are able to keep their troops in the field—famine and defeat are never absent from them.

Great Britain, the captain informs, has made propositions for peace—these were rejected by the national convention.

The federal executive, we understand, have sent for four of the United States Judges, to take their opinions on some part of our treaty of amity and commerce with France.

A French ship of 18 guns has appeared and sent into Chesapeake Bay, a Dutch ship with a cargo on board worth two millions of French livres (150,000, this currency.)

We learn, from an arrival at Baltimore, that 600 of the British yards fell in the action with the French on the 28th of May, near Courmayeur; and that the combined armies had retired from before Conde.

A vessel arrived at Baltimore, in 30 days from Cork, brings an account of the defeat of the combined army at Conde, and of an immense slaughter among them. That the French armies having been so successful, the people throughout England and Ireland are flocking for peace, and it was the prevailing opinion it would soon take place, highly in favor, and much to the honor of the French nation. We hear that the fortifications on Mad Island are repairing, and several cannon mounting for the defence of the river. A company of militia is already stationed there to be relieved weekly.

The ship Friendship, belonging to Philadelphia, was taken the 20th of May, on her return from France, by an English privateer ship called the Alexander, and sent to Jamaica. The pretence was, having French property on board.

At a meeting of a number of Citizens of the town of Lexington, at the house of Citizen Robert McGowan, for the purpose of taking under consideration the propriety of establishing a Democratic Society in this place.

On motion,
RESOLVED, That the Citizens here present, form themselves into a Democratic Society embracing the laudable objects of the Philadelphia Democratic Society.

RESOLVED, That Citizens William Murray, John Bradford, James Brown, Thomas Irwin, Robert McGowan and Thomas Todd, or any three of them be a committee for the purpose of drawing Articles and Rules for the government of this society, and that they make report at the State-House on Wednesday the 28th instant, at which time and place the Citizens of the County of Fayette are requested to attend to assist in carrying those laudable principles into execution.

RESOLVED, That Citizen John Bradford, be requested to publish the proceeding of the Philadelphia Democratic Society, in his next Gazette, and also these proceedings.

By order of the meeting.
August 22, 1793.

PRINCIPLES, ARTICLES and REGULATIONS,
Agreed upon by the MEMBERS of the DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY,
In Philadelphia, May 30th, 1793.

Principles, Articles, and Regulations.

THE Rights of Man, the genuine objects of society, and the legitimate principles of government, have been clearly developed by the successive revolutions of America and France. These events have withdrawn the veil, which concealed the dignity and the happiness of human race, and have taught us, no longer dazzled with adventitious splendor, or awed by antiquated usurpation, to erect the temple of Liberty on the ruins of Palaces and Thrones.

At this propitious period, when the name of freedom and equality is thus practically displayed, and when their value (best understood by those who have paid the price of acquiring them) is universally acknowledged, the patriotic mind will naturally be solicitous, by every proper precaution, to preserve and perpetuate the blessings which Providence hath bestowed upon our country; for, in reviewing the history of nations, we find occasion to lament, that the vigilance of the people has been too easily absorbed in victories; and that the prize, which has been achieved by the wisdom and valor of one generation, has too often been lost by the ignorance and dissipation of another.

With a view, therefore, to cultivate a just knowledge of rational liberty, to facilitate the enjoyment and exercise of our civil rights, and to transmit unimpaired, to posterity, the glorious inheritance of a free Republican Government, the Democratic Society of Pennsylvania is constituted and established. Unfettered by religious or national distinctions, unbiassed by party and unmoved by ambition, this institution embraces the interest and invites the support of every virtuous citizen. The public good is, indeed, its sole object, and we think, that the best means are pursued for obtaining it, when we recognize the following, as the fundamental principles of our association.

I. That the people have the inherent and exclusive right and power of making and altering forms of government; and that for regulating and protecting our social interests, a Republican Government is the most natural and beneficial form, which the wisdom of men has devised.

II. That the republican constitutions of the United States and the State of Pennsylvania, being framed and established by the people, it is our duty as good citizens, to support them. And in order effectually to do so, it is likewise the duty of every freeman, to conduct with attention, and to discuss without fear, the conduct of the public servants, in every department of government.

III. That, in considering the administration of public affairs, men and measures should be estimated according to their intrinsic merits; and therefore, regardless of party spirit or political connection, it is the duty of every citizen, by making the general welfare the rule of his conduct, to aid and approve those men and measures, which have an influence in promoting the prosperity of the commonwealth.

IV. That in the choice of persons to fill the offices of government, it is essential to the existence of a free republic that every citizen should act according to his own judgment; and, therefore, any attempt to corrupt or delude the people in exercising the rights of suffrage, either by promising the favour of one candidate, or traducing the character of another, is an offence equally injurious to moral rectitude and civil liberty.

V. That the People of Pennsylvania form but one indivisible community, whose political rights and interests, whose national honor and prosperity must, in degree and duration, be forever the same; and, therefore, it is the duty of every freeman, and shall be the endeavor of the Democratic Society, to remove the prejudices, to dissipate the affections, to enlighten the understanding, and to promote the happiness of all our fellow citizens.

Having united under these principles, we adopt the following rules and regulations for transacting the business of the institution.

Article I. The society shall be co-extensive with the State, but for the convenience of the members, there shall be a separate meeting in the city of Philadelphia, and one in each county, which shall chuse to adopt this Constitution. A member admitted in the city, or in any county, shall of course be a member of the society at large; and may attend any of the meetings wherever held.

Article II. A meeting of the society shall be held in the city of Philadelphia, on the first Thursday in every month, and in the respective counties as often and at such times as they shall by their own rules determine. But the president of each respective meeting may convene the members on any special occasion.

Article III. The election of new members and of the officers of the society shall be by ballot and by a majority of votes of the members present at each respective meeting. But no new member shall be voted for at the time meeting at which he is proposed. The names of the members proposing any candidates for admission shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose. Every member on his admission shall subscribe this Constitution and pay the sum of half a dollar to the treasurer for the use of the society.

Article IV. The officers of the meeting in the city of Philadelphia shall consist of a President, two Vice Presidents, two Secretaries, one Treasurer and a corresponding committee of five members; and the meetings of the respective committees shall chuse a President and such other officers as they think proper. The officers of the meeting held in the city of Philadelphia shall be chosen on the first Thursday in January in every year.

Article V. It shall be the duty of the corresponding committee, to correspond with the various meetings of the society and with all other societies, that may be established on similar principles, in any other of the United States, and to lay all communications which they shall make and receive, together with such other business as they shall from time to time deem proper, before the society at a meeting held within their respective counties.

Article VI. It shall be the duty of the secretaries to keep minutes of the proceedings of the several meetings; and of the treasurers, to receive and account for all monies to them respectively paid.

Taken up by the subscribers, near Clear creek, Woodford county, a bay mare, 8 or 9 years old, 13 hands 3 inches high, a star in her forehead, no perceivable brand; appraised to 60. Also a brown yearling horse colt, with a star in his forehead; appraised to 15. ss.

SACRED TO THE MUSES.
 From a DUBLIN PAPER.
A S O N G,
 Composed for the Volunteers.

C O M E ye Lads! who wish to shine
 Bright in future story,
 Make to arms, and foam the line
 That leads to martial glory.
 Beat the drum, the trumpet found,
 Dauntless and united,
 Danger face, maintain your ground
 And see your country
 righted.
 Freedom for the brave to share
 Is the noblest booty,
 To her standard then repair,
 And learn a soldier's duty.
 Beat the drum, &c.
 Prejudice degrades the mind,
 Learn to love your neighbours
 Let the welfare of mankind
 Direct your honest labours.
 Beat the drum, &c.
 France, no longer now your foe,
 Fills the world with wonder,
 See! her Sons, where'er they go,
 Burst havy's chains asunder.
 Beat the drum, &c.
 Irishmen can ne'er be free
 Whilst dullitions render them,
 Let them once like friends AGREE,
 And freedom will be lend them.
 Beat the drum, &c.

 DURING the late Election for Westminster, divers Confablers with their Watchmen, were sat at several places, to hinder the concourse of people from flocking there without some necessary Occasion; amongst others, one Gentleman being somewhat in the garb of a serving man, was examined what Lord he belonged unto? To which he readily replied, 'To the Lord Jehovah!'—Which word, being beyond the Confablers's understanding, he asked his Watchmen, if they knew any such Lord—they replied, No. However, the Confabler being unwilling to give dilafte, said, Well, let him pass, notwithstanding, I believe him to be some Scotch Lord or other!
